Notes from CLA President

Dan McCarthy

March 2023

Dear Members,

As I am writing my notes for this month, it is currently snowing. We didn't receive any snow in February, but now it starts to snow in March. Don't you just love Ohio weather.

I really enjoyed the Home & Garden show this year. Thank you to all the landscape companies that created these wonderful gardens that we all were able to enjoy in February. I don't know how you all are able to create such beautiful gardens in such a short period of time.

I am looking forward to St. Patrick's Day this Friday March 17th. You want to make sure you wear some green or you take the chance of getting pinched by a Leprechaun. Be careful out there.

We are planning a member meeting April 11th from 10:00 am until 12:00 pm at Lower.com Field. Please plan to attend. I have never been to the new stadium, and I am looking forward to it. I hope to see as many members there as possible.

Looking into the future, the 2024 Home & Garden Show is February 17-25, 2024. As of me writing this message, it is now 341 days until the 2024 Spring Home and Garden Show.

We are always looking for new ideas for member meetings. If your company would like to host a member meeting in 2023, please let me know or someone else on the CLA board. We would love to tour your location.

Please feel free to contact me at dmccarthy@ahlumarbor.com I look forward to hearing from everyone.

Let's be safe out there,

Dan McCarthy
President of C.L.A.

From Richard: I'm attaching the project drawings, highlighting the phase two components we aim to complete. Our architect designed the flower beds. I'm considering reducing the number of plants and exploring alternative options for the landscaping.

Faces of the Industry: Michael Davie

February 9, 2023

Michael Davie has always enjoyed landscaping, growing up working in the yard with his mother, but it wasn't until after he worked at Men's Wearhouse for 20 years that he decided he needed to change careers.

Davie wanted to be involved in something he could be passionate about, so he went back to school and earned his associate degree in landscape design management from Columbus State Community College.

"Having over 20 years of management and customer service experience by this point, along with a love of creating fine art, I figured I would be able to combine these skillsets to make a successful career," Davie says.

He says his mentors in the industry were his professors at Columbus State – Dick Ansley, Steve O’Neal and Deb Knapke. He says their passion and knowledge of the industry is infectious.

He has been in the landscape industry for 13 years now. He operated his own landscape maintenance company for three years, was a project manager with HRH Landscapes, Ltd. for five years and is now starting his fifth year at M.J. Design Associates, Inc., based in Plain City, Ohio, as an account manager.

Davie’s company was something he started to supplement his income while he worked full-time at Men’s Wearhouse to support his growing family. While he enjoyed it, he felt it was becoming cost and time prohibitive to acquire everything he needed to have a successful business.

“I also realized that there were a lot of things I still needed to learn about both the business and horticulture aspects of the business,” he says. “I decided I needed to go work at a company to gain real-world/hands-on experience and training.”

Davie says in his current position, every day is a little bit different. He’ll check to make sure the maintenance crews understand the daily work orders and he coordinates the weekly safety and training classes for the staff.

“As an account manager, I am responsible for enhancement sales, client satisfaction/retention, sales appointments and some design work,” he says. “Some days I am out working with the crews in the field to help and to train while on site. I am a member of several industry associations and share information with staff on what’s going on in the industry and how it affects us as a company.”

He says his favorite part of working for M.J. Design Associates is the passion, integrity and creativity that is at the heart of the company’s culture.

“Though we are running a business and want to be successful, the bottom line is not the driving force in who we are as a company,” he says.

The biggest challenge Davie has faced in the industry is not seeing the representation of many African-American-owned companies or workers.

“There is a large space for Caucasian, Hispanic and now the larger push for women workers in the industry,” he says. “I would like to see the industry push for more African American members of this community. Representation matters to me and especially to the younger generation. If they were to see other people like them doing this type of work, they would be more apt to take an interest in the work we are doing and become a part of the next wave of landscape professionals.”

As for where he sees himself in the next five years, he sees himself still advocating for this industry as a viable and respectful career path.

"I would like to change the stigma that landscapers are just 'hole diggers' and 'grass cutters,'" Davie says. "With so many different career paths in this industry, we need to find a way to let people know what is available to them. In most cases, I have found it is more important to let students' parents know what opportunities are available to and for their child."

He plans to stay involved in landscape associations and looks to sit on several boards. He says he's also interested in becoming a part owner of M.J. Design Associates and continuing their track record of quality work and excellent customer service.

"One thing I would like to change about the industry are companies who don't do the right thing by their customer and are only concerned about the dollars," Davie says. "Bad planting practices, bad planting designs, price gouging, faulty craftsmanship. These practices don't do any good for the industry as a whole and put a bad stigma on the companies who consistently do the right thing by their clients and employees."

Davie says the most important thing he has learned on his career path is if you don't love what you're doing, find something else that you're passionate about. He says he would tell his younger self to explore more options, from careers to financial opportunities.

"Don't settle and always follow your dreams no matter how crazy they may seem," Davie says. "This is what the meaning of life means to me now."

He says his favorite thing about the landscape industry is the people, as he has built lasting relationships that allow him to learn from others.

"The awesome thing about this industry is the willingness to share information and help each other when and wherever possible," Davie says. "We aren't just an industry; we are a community."

PLANTING CALLERY PEAR NO LONGER PERMITTED IN OHIO

January 20, 2023

COLUMBUS, Ohio – It is now illegal to sell, grow, or plant Callery pear (also known as Bradford pear) in Ohio because of its invasive qualities and likelihood to cause economic or environmental harm. There is no requirement for the removal of existing plants, but the Ohio Department of Natural Resources (ODNR) Division of Forestry encourages control and removal to benefit native forest ecosystems.

“Callery pear often dominates young, regenerating forest areas and inhibits the growth and establishment of native plant species,” Chief of the ODNR Division of Forestry Dan Balser said. “Halting the further sale and intentional propagation of Callery pear will help reduce the further introduction of this environmentally harmful tree species.”

Callery pear is an ornamental species native to regions of Asia. It was introduced to North America in the early 1900s for agricultural use. It quickly became a favorite in landscaping for its adaptability, flowering, fall color, and rounded crown.

Callery pear is most easily spotted in early spring, when it blooms with white flowers along highways, yards, and fields and other disturbed sites.

The rounded leaves are dark green with a shiny upper surface, and arranged alternately. The leaf margin is wavy and finely serrated. The white flowers are clustered with five petals, and blooms typically have a strong, unpleasant smell, often compared to rotting fish. Tiny, hard pears appear in the fall. The brown fruit is almost woody until frost softens it. After that, the fruits are eaten by birds who spread the seeds.

The tree was also believed to be unable to reproduce by seed and bred to be sterile. However, many cultivars can cross-pollinate with each other and produce viable fruit. The most popular of those is the Callery pear is 'Bradford.' Other common species include 'Cleveland Select,' 'Autumn Blaze,' 'Chanticleer,' and 'Whitehouse.'

Depending on site conditions, Ohioans may consider using tree species native to the eastern United States with similar characteristics to the Callery pear. Some potential alternatives are listed below.

- serviceberry (Amelanchier spp.)
- eastern redbud (Cercis canadensis)
- chokecherry (Prunus virginiana)
- American plum (Prunus americana)
- flowering dogwood (Cornus florida)
- eastern hophornbeam (Ostrya virginiana)
- American hornbeam (Carpinus caroliniana)
- yellowwood (Cladrastis kentukea)
- hawthorn (Crataegus spp.)
- blackgum (Nyssa sylvatica)

For more information on how to remove or control Callery pear in forested or natural settings, see the fact sheets

Landscape Inspirations Symposium: Fostering Intentional Plant Communities

April 1 @ 9:00 am - 12:30 pm

Harness the power of design by fostering landscapes that mimic ecosystem patterns. Implementing these design principles contributes to a more diverse, balanced and bountiful garden. Kingwood's Executive Director, Josh Steffen, will introduce the concepts of intentional plant communities and how these design approaches differ from traditional garden design.

Keynote Speaker: Austin Eischeid

Creating a Four-Season Garden – Learn how to create your own dynamic, four-season garden from the designer of the Meadow Garden area of Kingwood's Perennial Garden, Austin Eischeid of Austin Eischeid Garden Design. By using the right combination of plants, gardeners can reduce watering and weeding as well as attract a wide variety of birds and other pollinators. Explore how planting long-lived perennials and grasses, adding spring bulbs, leaving seed heads standing, and designing with fall and winter interest can transform your garden.
